DESIGN INTENT:

The Next Factor represents a throwback to one of the asymmetric weight blocks that helped put Storm on the map. RAD-TQ features an optimized shape that is almost identical to the X-Factor that was introduced back in 2002. Like the X-Factor, the Next Factor uses a unique combination of a high RG, high differential, and a relatively conservative PSA strength. This adds up to a design that ignores the front part of the lane and unleashes one of the most devastating backend shapes ever seen. The R3S cover was chosen to accentuate the characteristics of the weight block. Fitting right between R2S and TX-16, R3S will give you that rare combination of control and angularity the X-Factor was famous for. The Next Factor will be right at home when it becomes necessary to open your angle of attack.
